

Irish Setter
Male

A blank template for a dichotomous key. It features a central vertical line that splits into two main horizontal branches. Each of these branches further divides into two sub-branches, creating a tree-like structure. The branches are represented by horizontal lines of varying lengths, with the outermost lines being the longest. The entire structure is symmetrical and designed for users to write classification criteria and organism names.