

Beagle
Male

A blank template for a dichotomous key. It features a central vertical line that splits into two main horizontal branches. Each of these branches further splits into two more horizontal branches, and each of those splits into two more, creating a total of eight terminal horizontal lines. The lines are black and the background is white, providing a clear structure for writing classification criteria and organism names.